A NOTE FROM MARK

EXPERIENCE MEETS IMAGINATION

Creativity has always been part of my approach to hospitality — whether developing a restaurant, improving a guest experience, creating a new product or simply finding a better way of doing something.

Today, I'm taking what I've learned over a lifetime in hospitality and looking at it through a different lens — sharing ideas, helping others, creating new concepts and exploring what's possible.

One of those ideas became The Hotel Mojo, my concept for a different kind of country music hotel.

Another unexpectedly brought me back to something I've always loved — music.

Experience gave me the knowledge.

Curiosity keeps me moving.

Creativity keeps me creating.

And I still believe some of the best ideas begin with one simple question:

What if? Welcome to my world.

1,000 MILES ★ FROM SOMEWHERE ★

The journey came first. The soundtrack is catching up.

Songwriting wasn't part of the original plan.
Somewhere along the road, though, thoughts turned into words. Words started finding a rhythm.
And before long, a collection of songs began taking shape.

They're part of a growing collection of original songs drawn from the miles behind me — people I've met, roads less traveled, lessons learned with a little dust on my boots, no regrets, and a curiosity about whatever might be waiting around the next bend.

The songs aren't ready to leave the campfire just yet.
That's all right.
Some things deserve the time it takes to get them right.

Good swords are made in fire.

For now, think of this page as a marker along the highway —
a glimpse of another part of the journey that's still unfolding.

When life throws you a bone,
it's never too late to learn new tricks.

Stay tuned.
There's more road ahead... for sure.

Small moments. Big consequences.

Real experiences. Real lessons. The business of hospitality through a human lens.

01

A ROOM IS A ROOM.
A SMILE MAKES THE DIFFERENCE.

Human connection can recover an experience.

02

WHEN “NO” COSTS
$250,000

Empathy and empowerment protect business.

03

WHEN HONESTY BECOMES AN INVESTMENT

Trust creates future business.

04

WHEN HITTING THE TARGET
MISSES THE POINT

Leadership must know what the numbers are causing.

05

TWO HOURS BECAME TWENTY MINUTES

Challenge weak management and solve the guest's problem.

A ROOM IS A ROOM. A Smile Makes the Difference.

A four-hour journey became an exhausting 12-hour ordeal. Delays, hunger, frustration—and finally arriving to find no one there to greet us.

Then two boatmen welcomed my mother and me with genuine smiles, warmth and humor.

Within minutes, the frustration began to disappear.

Nothing expensive had changed. The people changed the experience.

“A room is a room. A smile makes the difference.”

THE LESSON

The true value of a guest isn't one room night. It's return visits, referrals, reputation—and the people they influence.

WHEN “NO” COSTS $250,000

Before ancillary revenue.

A senior decision-maker was considering the hotel for an executive meeting worth approximately $250,000. At dinner, he requested the same whiskey he'd just enjoyed at the hotel bar across the hall.

The restaurant served only beer and sake. He politely asked if someone could bring one over. The answer remained a courteous “No.”

The employees weren't rude. They were polite—but the request fell outside the box, and no one felt empowered to find a solution.

THE LESSON

Skill training alone isn't enough. Empathy, judgment and empowerment must turn training into action.

POLITENESS WITHOUT A SOLUTION IS STILL A “NO.”

Staff-to-guest interaction should start with a smile—and end with both smiling.

“If you can't take care of me, what will happen when I bring my team here?”

The hotel lost the business.

WHEN HONESTY BECOMES AN INVESTMENT

1,500 GUESTS

One wedding. A relationship worth far more.

A prominent family approached us about a wedding for 1,500 guests. We prepared a fair proposal based on what it would genuinely take to deliver the experience.

Their representative told us: “We want to hold the wedding at your hotel. Your proposal was not only reasonable—it was honest.”

We didn't ask, “How much can we charge?” We asked, “What is the right price for what we're going to deliver?”

THE PHONES KEPT RINGING.

THE LESSON

There is a difference between maximizing the revenue from a transaction and maximizing the value of a relationship.

TRUST HAS A LIFETIME VALUE.

Sometimes the most profitable decision isn't how much you can make from a guest today. It's giving them a reason to call you tomorrow.

WHEN HITTING THE TARGET MISSES THE POINT QUOTA MET. Bookings stopped.

A catering manager had reached her monthly sales quota. Instead of continuing to pursue and accept appropriate business, she stopped taking additional bookings.

On paper, the target had been achieved. In reality, available revenue was being turned away.

The issue wasn't simply the quota. It was leadership understanding what was actually happening behind the number.

NUMBERS TELL YOU WHAT HAPPENED.
BEING CLOSE TO THE BUSINESS TELLS YOU WHY.

THE LESSON

Targets should motivate performance—not become ceilings on performance. A leader needs a finger on the pulse, not just a monthly report.

A target is a tool—not permission to stop selling.

TWO HOURS BECAME TWENTY MINUTES

2 HOURS → 20 MINUTES

A banquet manager told a client that converting the ballroom from a classroom setup to a gala dinner would take two hours.

The client came to me, understandably perturbed: “What are we supposed to do—drink orange juice outside the ballroom for two hours waiting for dinner?”

This was not hotel procedure. It was poor management that I had inherited—and a problem the guest should never have had to absorb.

We reorganized the effort and completed the changeover in 20 minutes.

THE LESSON

A manager's limitation should never automatically become the guest's limitation. Good leadership questions the answer, organizes the team and finds a better way.

The manager was later let go.

THE GUEST DIDN'T NEED AN EXPLANATION.
SHE NEEDED A SOLUTION.

SOME IDEAS ARE WORTH THE JOURNEY.
THE ROAD HAS BEEN LONG.
THE VISION IS CLEAR.
AND THE FIRE STILL BURNS.
THE HOTEL MOJO MAY BE WAITING
SOMEWHERE DOWN THE TRACKS.
MAYBE THE NEXT PART OF THE JOURNEY
ISN'T MEANT TO BE TRAVELED ALONE.

CARE TO COME ALONG?
